About CAM

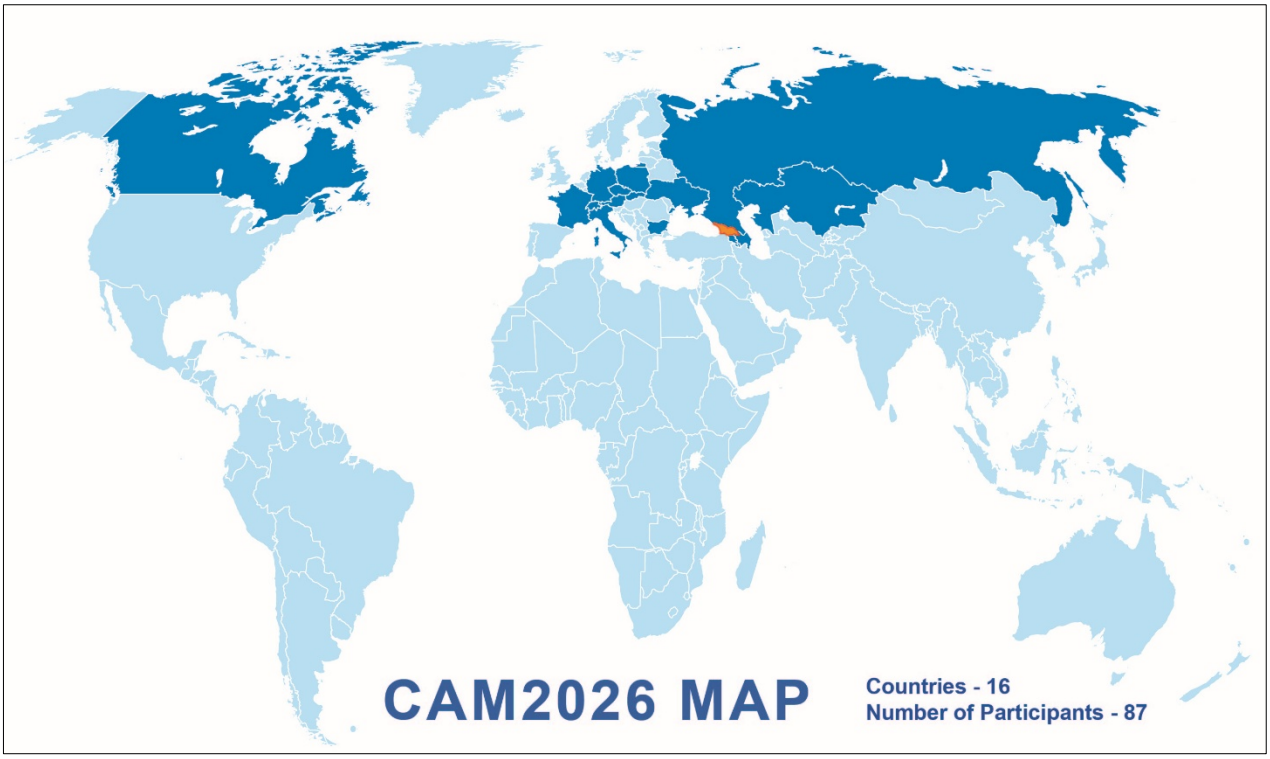

Ivane Javakhishvili Tbilisi State University (TSU) and the Georgian Cartographers Association (GCA) are launching a series of international scientific conferences entitled "Cartography and Modernity" (CAM), to be held regularly in Georgia.

This interdisciplinary event aims to bring together representatives from multiple countries engaged in cartography, geographic information systems, spatial data analysis, and related disciplines. Participants will share knowledge and experience regarding recent advances, exchange cartographic technologies, methods, and innovations, and establish a platform for effective collaboration among organisations and individual specialists in these fields.

The first conference CAM-2026 will take place at Tbilisi State University on 29–31 October 2026. The International Cartographic Association (ICA) has officially endorsed the event and listed it in its 2026 events schedule.

CAM-2026 is dedicated to the 110th anniversary of the birth of the outstanding Georgian geographer and cartographer, founder of cartographic theory, Corresponding Member of the Georgian Academy of Sciences, Doctor of Geographical Sciences, Professor Alexander Aslanikashvili.

Countries Participating in the Conference

Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bulgaria, Canada, Czech Republic, France, Germany, Italy, Kazakhstan, Poland, Russia, Slovakia, Switzerland, Ukraine and Georgia.

Alexsander Aslanikashvili - 110

Alexander Aslanikashvili
(1916-1981)

"Cartography reminds us of a kindhearted old man who consistently helps others, cares about their future, and does not seek his own identity or personal recognition".

A. Aslanikashvili

Alexander Aslanikashvili, a prominent Georgian cartographer, is widely regarded as the founder of the theory of cartography. During the 1950s and 1960s, he conducted substantial research that led to the development of an original concept of Metacartography. He transformed cartography from a primarily technical and operational discipline into a recognized academic science. In 1968, the monograph "Issues in the General Theory of Cartography" was published in Georgian. A revised edition appeared in Russian in 1974.

Metacartography is the study of the subject matter, method, and language of cartography. According to this concept, cartography is understood as the science of the spatial organisation of objects and phenomena in objective reality and their temporal variability. This concept develops the methodological foundations of cartography. A. Aslanikashvili introduced cartographic forms designed for comparison, analysis, synthesis, abstraction, generalization, and modeling. Within the framework of metacartography, the language of maps was examined as a distinct system of signs. The language of maps has been examined through four semiotic aspects: syntactic, semantic, sigmatic, and pragmatic. A. Aslanikashvili is widely recognized as a world-class pioneer in research within this field.

A. Aslanikashvili further examined the concept of "scale" as a gnoseological category. Several types of scale were examined: (a) spatial scale, defined as a degree of abstraction; (b) content scale, as a degree of generalization; and (c) temporal scale, as a degree of generalization concerning the essence of development. Subsequent research on the time scale was advanced by A. Aslanikashvili's students, Niko Beruchashvili and Tengiz Gordeziani.

In 1999, A. Aslanikashvili's monograph "Metacartography: Fundamental Problems" was translated into Japanese and published with the guidance of the distinguished Japanese cartographer Toshitomo Kanakubo. In addition to his contributions to cartography theory, A. Aslanikashvili played a significant role in developing various branches of the field, including thematic, atlas, and historical cartography.

A. Aslanikashvili held several prominent positions, including Head of the Chair of Cartography and Geodesy at Tbilisi State University, Head of the Cartography Division at the Institute of Geography, and Director of the same Institute. In 1979, he was elected as a corresponding member of the Academy of Sciences of Georgia.

In 1981, A. Aslanikashvili's final work, "The Unity and Systemic Essence of Geography and Cartography," was published. In this work, the author offers a theoretical foundation for the shared origin of geography and cartography.

A Brief History of the Georgian School of Scientific Cartography

Vakhushti Bagrationi
(1696-1757)

The founder of the Georgian geographical and cartographic school is widely regarded as Vakhushti Bagrationi, the son of King Vakhtang VI.

Vakhushti Bagrationi was a prominent cartographer, geographer, and historian of the 18th century. Vakhushti produced three comprehensive atlases: the first in 1735, the second in 1745, and the third in 1755. These atlases contain maps of the world, Europe, the Caucasus, and the Georgian principalities. The atlas also includes situation plans. The atlas, produced in 1745, was added to UNESCO's Memory of the World Register in 2013 (https://www.unesco.org/en/memory-world/description-georgian-kingdom-and-geographical-atlas-vakhushti-bagrationi).

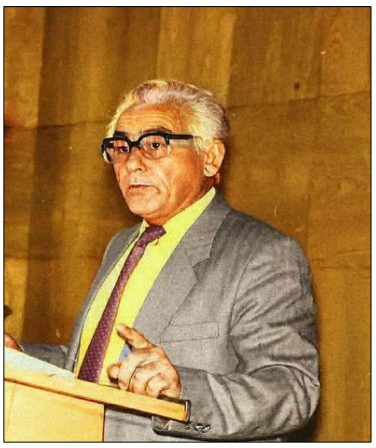

Vakhushti specialised in heraldry, and his atlases include the blazons of various Georgian principalities. In 1997, the 300th anniversary of Vakhushti's birth was marked. This occasion was commemorated by the publication of a consolidated edition of his atlases — a large-format volume titled "The Atlas of Vakhushti Bagrationi." His book, "Description of the Georgian Kingdom," or "Geography of Georgia," was also published.

Georgian cartography continued to develop in the 19th century. During this period, the country came under the influence of the Russian Empire, and, consequently, Russian-born cartographers (such as Jozef Chodzko and others) worked primarily in Georgia.

In the first half of the twentieth century, Professor Andria Benashvili, a prominent Georgian geodesist and astronomer and one of the founders of Tbilisi State University (1918), was active in his field. He subsequently established the Chair of Astronomy and Geodesy at the university. He wrote the first Georgian-language textbook on topography. Also noteworthy is the contribution of docent Sergi Tskhakaia, who authored the first Georgian-language cartography textbook. He developed the Chair that A. Benashvili originally established. During this period, it was renamed the Chair of Geodesy and Cartography. S. Tskhakaia mentored Alexander Aslanikashvili, a world-renowned cartographer and the author of a theory of cartography. In subsequent years, several prominent cartographers and surveyors contributed to the field in Georgia, including Grigol Khunjua, Rostom Chekurishvili, Niko Beruchashvili, Jansug Kekelia, Irakli Matureli and others.

Cartography in Georgia is presently advancing in five distinct directions: as an academic discipline, as a system of production and technological tools, as a military field, as a methodology, and as an art form.

The Georgian Cartographers Association (GCA)

Jansugh Kekelia
(1935-2013)

GCA is a professional non-governmental organization that unites organisations and individuals interested in cartography and related disciplines. The initiator of the establishment of the GCA was Jansugh Kekelia, a professor at Tbilisi State University and its first president.

Association was founded by the General Meeting of founding members on December 14, 1998.

The founders are:

– Ivane Javakhishvili Tbilisi State University;

– Vakhushti Bagrationi Institute of Geography of the Georgian Academy of Sciences;

– Geographical Society of Georgia;

– Georgian Geodetic Society;

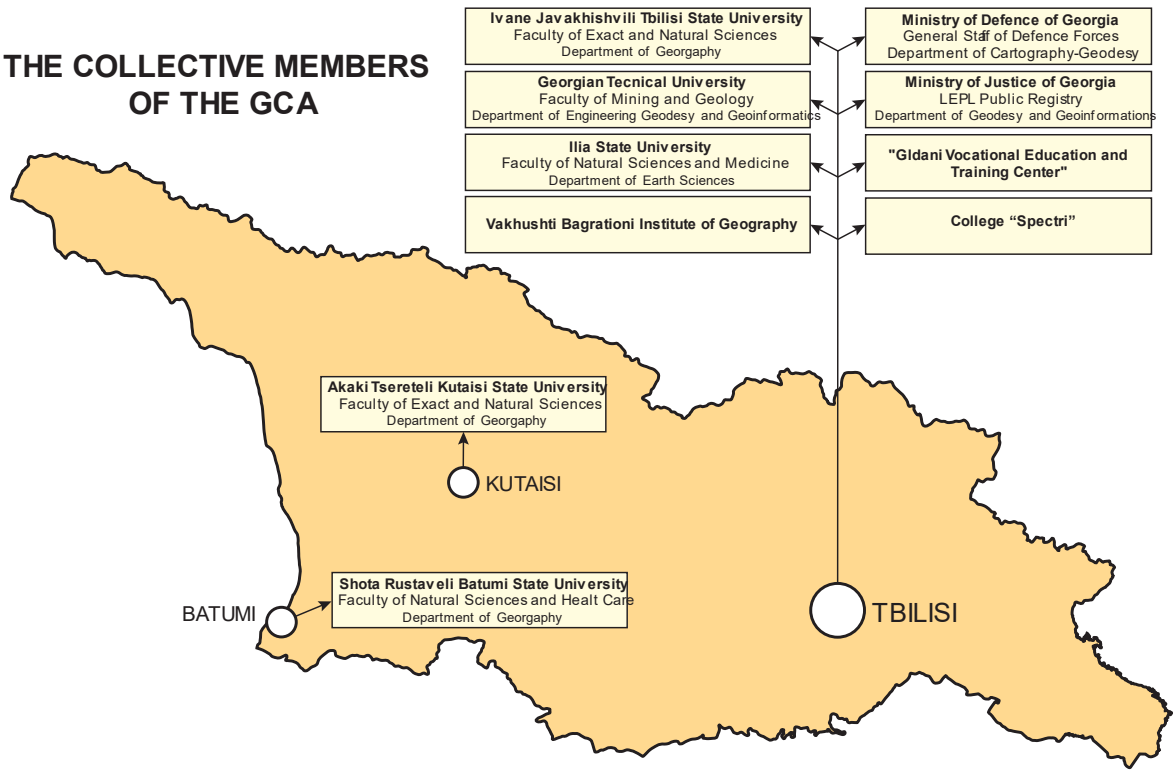

– Ministry of Defense of Georgia;

– State Department of Geodesy and Cartography of Georgia.

The mission of the GCA is to promote the advancement of cartography, geographic information systems, and geodesy; foster the development of modern spatial technologies; support scientific and educational initiatives; and disseminate cartographic knowledge within both professional and public domains.

In 2024, GCA became an affiliate member of the International Cartographic Association and remains actively involved in its events.

Currently, GCA operates throughout Georgia and unites about 400 members and institutional and collective members.
